Cameo Comedy

with

Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance

Cliff is a loving husband and Virginia is his little turtledove. Everything is lovely with the newlyweds until Cliff returns to his home and finds his dear little better half in the arms of a husky stranger.

This ruins the entire day for Cliff. In fact he feels so badly about it that he wanders into a Navy recruiting office and asks the officer if they have a position open in the Navy. By the time Cliff answers the questions he finds himself enlisted in the Navy, decked out in a uniform and ordered to report on board the S. S. California. Then he goes home to show his wife that she can't break his heart.

When he arrives his wife surprises him by telling him that the stranger is her brother. Cliff then changes his mind about the Navy and resolves to tell the Navy that it'll have to struggle along without him on board.

Cliff is almost a total loss on board the ship. He tries to scrub the deck and lands in the officers's mess. He gets in bad every chance he gets Virginia, to be near hubby, dons a uniform and gets aboard the ship. The loving couple find each other and they are as helpless as a couple of "butter and egg" men in the White Light district. After nearly drowning the crew and sinking the ship they are sent to the hold, where they are soon rocked in the cradle of the deep.
